FRIDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 6.

SIAMESE TWINS' WIVES .- Much speculation has always been rife as to how the Twins courted, and finally became joined in the bonds of Hymen. It happened that they were travelling through the South, and stopped at the town of Traphill, in Wilkes county, North Carolina. The country in this locality being very romantic, and the land good, the Twins determined to settle, and accordingly engaged in business in the village, being excellent traders, and their novel condition soon attracted many persons to them; among these a farmer named Yates, who lived in the immediate vicinity, and who wass possessed of two bouncing daughters. Chang and Eng looked upon these women tenderly, and evinced great affection for them, and, like ordinary young folks, made numerous calls at the residence of their bewitchers, and there being a pair of them all around, a match was soon made, and the four were two (or one.) These wives always displayed great affection for their liege lords, and purchaser, satisfactorily endorsed and the title manifested the usual jealousies common to the human family. From this double union there were some twenty-two children born. Mrs. Chang presented her husband with some nine or ten, and of these but two were boys, while in the Eug family the daughters were proportionately outnumbered. The offspring, contrary to the general opinion and preceding state ments, with few exceptions. were healthy, robust children. - Cor. Phil. Press.

A MEMPHIAN WIFE. - We find the following in the Memphis Avalanche: Mrs. A. G. Reynaud, the other day, imagined that her husband was devoting his time. money and affection to a Miss Finley, and by way of revenge went to the president of the Howard Association, gave him twelve hundred dollars, which she said she found in her busband's pocket, adding that the amount was part of thirty-five bundred dollars that Mr. Reynaud stole during the epidemic, while act ing as secretary of the Howard Association. Mr. Reynaud was soon arrested and committed to jail in default of bail. He stated that he never had the twelve hundred dollars, never stole any money, and asked that the books be examined, and his whole conduct subjected to the closest scrutiny. He admitted visiting Miss Finley sometimes, but there was nothing in his "lingering" to warrant the rising of the mon ster jealousy at his own home, which his wife managed to make very uncomfortable for him. The officers of the association have given the books a full investigation, but find nothing to warrant the belief that Mr. Reynaud embezzled any of the money.
